

The river song by Ingvild Syntropia

The river drowned my tears
In her mighty swell
She whispered back to me,
Don't worry child, all will be well, all will be well

Chorus

Wherever you will go, whatever you will see,
Remember that I flow,
that I flow through thee
that I flow, I flow through thee

I threw her a stone, it hopped and skipped a beat made ripples endlessly
Then sank beneath my feet
My own reflection forced to meet

Oh, water cold, take my body in your fold
Mould me like you do the stone
Do not leave me alone
Until I know the tone

Chorus

Wherever you will go, whatever you will see,
Remember that I flow,

that I flow through thee

that I flow, I flow through thee

The hum of the wet, the wild, the still,

The force that kill, the force that heal

You've seen the eons, you've seen it all,

To you I am so very small

Teach me how to listen, how to dwell,

To simply be here with every cell

I'll teach you quiet,

I'll teach you still, if you do as I will

Chorus

Wherever you will go, whatever you will see,

Remember that I flow,

And that I flow through thee

that I flow through thee

Lay down and listen through gut and bone

Willing to tread some paths alone

And by all things dark and bright

Put down your phone, the stars are alight

Chorus

Wherever you will go, whatever you will see,

Remember that I flow,

And that I flow through thee

that I flow through thee

Chorus Repeat

Wherever you will go, whatever you will see,

Remember that I flow,

And that I flow through thee

that I flow through thee

Duckling mother sweet

Hiding in the reed

Found a grassy mound

To put her babies on safe and sound

Sheltered by night's veil

Sun's last rays resting on her tail

Soft little cries, wanting to stay near

Huddle in close until sleep is here

Dream of clear waters

Treats on muddy shore

Until the dawn brings hope once more
