

THE POWER OF THE WORD

Greetings, my very beloved friends here, blessings and love envelop you and penetrate your very core. With joy do I resume my communication with you, although, really, this communication has never been broken.

Most of you here can feel with clarity that you are deeply involved in a magnificent process -- the process of the spirit penetrating that which has alienated itself from the spirit. Now, as I have explained before, the alienated part is on its own and creates its own momentum. It becomes involved in this momentum, creating and recreating its own patterns. Translated into human terms, this means that negative creation seems to be the stronger aspect in a person's life. He appears to be caught in it, unable, as it were, to reverse this pattern. You, on this path, with the work you have done until now, begin to realize that it is indeed possible to come out of the negative pattern of creation, of the momentum that takes hold of you as if it had an independent life of its own that has nothing to do with you. You seem to be its victim. You do not realize how you very directly created this movement that carries you of its own.

You experience and witness in the creation of the path, of your Center, that this movement is part of a grandiose scheme that must transcend the volitional, conscious aspect of your being. You are now indeed engaged in a most positive momentum that is the stronger aspect, notwithstanding the still existing presence of lower self aspects. The higher self is becoming constantly predominant. This is not superimposed in a wishful denial of the lower self; it is the result of a genuine transformation well grounded in reality. You see the fruits of this in your personal life to an ever growing degree, and you see the fruits in the growth and expansion, in depth and width of the community as a whole.

I want you to be very much aware of the fact that the higher purpose of this movement goes far beyond your present life. It is a preparation of important changes in evolution, and you are instruments, all of you, each in your own way. Each of you in his own way needs to realize the importance of his task from an inner place that is not ego-involved, not in vanity or pride. And that is possible right now. If you so choose, you can know the happiness of being such an instrument for fulfilling a task for a much higher cause of the deepest significance without pride and vanity. You can do this right now and thus further contribute to the energy and the consciousness that create this movement.

The movement of consciousness is opposite to how human beings imagine it. The truth is that the dualistic, cut-off life is not "raised," as it is often said, into higher realms of being. This is a reversed view, fitted to a consciousness still steeped in space and time-bound terms. It would be more accurate to say that higher realms come "down" and penetrate the lower realms, rather than saying that lower realms raise themselves up into higher ones. According to this latter concept, the earth sphere would remain at its present level of development while its inhabitants rise up. This is only partially true. In the actual evolutionary movement, the earth is increasingly penetrated with the energies of higher consciousness transforming and spiritualizing the earlier cruder energies and consciousness. This is the task in which you are deeply involved, fundamentally and first with your own personality and consequently fulfilling a task in conjunction with higher planes for others.

In the process of your individual path, you experience how that which is clear and truthful in you and encompasses limitless spans of being, of generosity, of love infiltrates into the realms of the lower self with its little faithless concerns. It is similar with the mass consciousness of man: those of its aspects which are not too resistant embrace the movement of the Christ consciousness which sweeps through the inner levels of reality and comes from realms that might be designated as "higher," that are more evolved, in truth, and purified. As this happens, petty feelings of egotism and jealousy make way for a deep knowledge of your own value, of your right to stretch your whole being into rich fulfillment, and of your unity with all other life. Let this awareness fill your soul, your mind, your heart, and your body -- your whole being. Let yourself know that you are divine beauty, and so is the next human being, all human beings. You are all one, and you need not fight for what is yours. All you need to do is claim what you were always meant to experience, but this your inner self will only let you do to its fullest extent when you purify yourself; when you become deeply honest; when you have the courage and integrity to expose all lower self aspects and consider them in their effects. Let this motivate you for the great task of self-transformation which is, as you increasingly see, not only possible, but the natural movement of your soul which your fear and ignorance try to stop.

Let the light of truth and love fill your day, fill your actions, fill your attitudes toward yourself, and let the involuntary constructive forces of the Christ consciousness take over and carry you to create and recreate, thus making your life the glory that is yours to behold and to experience. You expand into it more and more, and you can only stand in awe at what you behold. The expansion and transformation that you witness now is only a beginning. Much more of it is to come. Your own development will make you capable of withstanding the highest energies of joy and fulfillment. And do not forget, what you already experience in your lives and in your community is a result of combined constructive input, honest investment and commitment, thoughts, intentions, and actions of the highest nature. These, in turn, eliminate the walls between your human consciousness and entities of high development whose force and sphere of influence merge with your love, truth, good will, and giving to the universe, thereby creating a mutuality of the highest order as well as the momentum that you now so strongly feel carries you.

In tonight's lecture I will speak very precisely about this process, of how such a process can be initiated in an even more conscious way, how you can change the process from a negative to a positive self-perpetuating motion and creation. How can you create an involuntary movement through the voluntary system? I have promised you to speak about the power of the word. This will be the topic now. Let us first understand what is the word? The word is indeed the creative agent. The word is a psychic nuclear point or a psychic nuclear explosion that creates movement and a systematic chain reaction, one link logically and inexorably following another until the word has become deed, fact, and finished creation. The word creates an energy pattern of further psychic nuclear points, each link, each point being a "word" too, a "sub-creative agent," as it were. Each word is a blueprint without which the structure cannot be built. The word is expression and creation. It is plan, knowledge, opinion, consciousness. The word is feeling, attitude, and intentionality. The word carries immense energy powers of its own kind, differing from other energies. The word is what is behind all creation. Creation cannot exist without a word spoken, known, held, believed in, and committed to in the area of that specific creation. The word is a conglomerate of all of these and more. The word that is spoken reveals the will that motivates this particular word. It can be the divine will or the will of the cut-off, ignorant, and destructive particle of consciousness. The word is the sum total of your beliefs in any given area where you speak the word -- be it conscious or not. The word is the sun that creates the planets. It is the energizing force and it is design.

There is so much contained in the word that it is not for nothing that Scripture starts with the postulate that in the beginning was, or actually is, the Word. There always will be the word. The word, as you know it, is the word God spoke. From that word all creation, including your personality, came into being. The word is the blueprint behind all you can see, experience, feel. There are many words creating many aspects of creation -- in the planetary system, in the mass consciousness, and in the individual consciousness.

Now how can you apply this truth to yourself in your practical life? Perhaps you will glean from the work on your path you have done until now that every situation you experience is the product of a word you have spoken and are perhaps still speaking constantly within in one way or another, on one level of awareness or another. It is our aim on the path to make all these words you speak day in and day out, every hour and every minute of the day, conscious so that you can understand your creation.

Most of the time you are extremely "busy" (I mean all of mankind) so as to block out the words you speak, and you produce noise in your inner system so that you do not hear your own words. A new phase on your path can now be contemplated and entered into (by some already now, by some only later) to make yourselves very conscious of the words you speak and what and how they create.

The word can be divided within itself. When you speak opposite words that cancel one another out on different levels of awareness, you become confused and you create accordingly. If you create fog so as not to know the words you speak, to overshadow them with other words, it is necessary to painstakingly crystallize the word that is most responsible for the creation of your life situation. You should do this with both the positive and negative creations.

In a sense you have already done this, but not in this clear way. You now become more ready to handle the sharp tool that speaking the word can be. This knowledge in itself is not new. It has been postulated throughout the ages and is professed in various corners of the earth. But often it is applied on top of the fog and the negative words without lifting out the obstacles and counter-currents. I spoke of this a long time ago but only fleetingly because much work had to be done by all before I could come back to this topic in a meaningful way. The timing here is crucial. Words of truth and creative beauty spoken when the underlying material is not made compatible with those levels of consciousness that speak those words can at best create a short circuit, at worst a split and a division in consciousness. This is why it is preferable if for a while "the word" is an honest admission and exposure of your negative intentionality and your lower self motives. Doing so implies attitudes of truthfulness, humility, courage, faith, and many other higher self qualities. But speaking words revealing principles of divine nature when the lower self is hidden and denied implies attitudes of wishful thinking, pride, lack of faith (fear of exposing what is not perfect), laziness (shirking the process of becoming, growing, developing, transforming in realistic, painstaking ways), and many others. So you see, my friends, it is a matter of subtle awareness when the word of divine limitless abundance can really be spoken in truth.

Let us concentrate now on specific words that reach very deep levels of your being. I mean here the word you speak regarding your own value. I have indicated in recent lectures that your path is going to open up also in this direction. There is a direct linkage between the power of the word and self-value. They go together. For how can you speak the word of faith in your own unfoldment and fulfillment if you secretly believe that you have no value and therefore no right to experience bliss? How can you even challenge the assumption of your worthlessness that you all carry inside your hearts to some degree if you are so terrified that this is the ultimate truth of your being? Then you can only continue to block this "knowledge" and defend against it. As you know, it is precisely by and through those defensive maneuvers that you reinforce the belief in your unacceptability because all defenses are negative, destructive, and create guilt. So even when you try, on the surface, to tell yourself -- belligerently -- that you do deserve fulfillment, peace of mind, pleasure, and abundance; underneath you will fear not ever attaining all this, not really deserving it. You fear that if you did acquire these desirable assets, it would only be by "stealing," and you would be punished. So, as you speak the word for what you long for, what every human being longs for and should indeed experience, so do you simultaneously speak the word against it on another level. The same applies to everything in life. While you are in this state of division and self-denial, you must feel pessimistic and fearful about the world as such and see it only in fragments, out of context, reaffirming your fearful visions.

Thus the process of the path is essential to establish the one-pointed word. Only through the honesty and courage of self-exposure and purification will you gain sufficient initial self-esteem to expose your devastating belief in your valuelessness. Only when you pierce through the superficial substitute maneuvers of false self-value, making room for facing your painful belief in being valueless, can you begin to see this assumption and cast doubt on your self-doubt. In that way you can constantly utter and pronounce words of truth. Even questions can be words of truth: "Is this assertion of my value a defense or a real expression?" "Do I underneath my superiority and arrogance falter and doubt my intrinsic value?" And when answers to these questions show that this is indeed so, then the word of truth can be expressed, perhaps again by an initial question: "Is it true that this or that lower self aspect makes me undeserving, unlovable, bad, valueless? Or is there something else in me that would justify me to appreciate and love myself, that deserves esteem and fulfillment?" So questions are also often words of truth.

So begin to see the words you speak behind the smoke screen, to yourself about yourself. On those deepest levels you malign yourself. You speak negative words about yourself. Those words need to be crystallized. They may exist only in a vague, hazy, inarticulated way. The power of the word is no less when it is inarticulate. There always is an immense power in the word. For the word is full of energy. Humankind at this stage of development becomes increasingly aware of energy and its importance. But you are not sufficiently aware yet that the thought and the word itself are energy -- energy of a different kind.

Every level of the personality is an expression of a different kind of energy. Feelings have a different type of energy. The mental levels, the will level, the physical level, and, finally, the level of the spirit, of the higher self -- all are different energy types or kinds. To feel and recognize the power and energy of the word is immensely important. This is vastly underestimated. You believe it does not matter what you think, what you say.

You can say a word with a loud voice, or you can say a word inside of you. The word that is not uttered by the voice, that is not heard by the ear outside is not necessarily less powerful than the uttered word, pronounced with the vocal cords. Many words are spoken with the vocal cords that have much less energy, for they are not rooted in strong beliefs. They are lightly uttered without feeling or conviction, to fill the void within. The power of these words is an indirect one in that these words create fog that separates the consciousness from the words spoken within that do have the power either constructively or destructively. So the lightly uttered word, without impact, without driving force, without depth, and without roots -- be it spoken or be it the pitter-patter of thoughts -- has nevertheless a serious effect on the creative process that each human being wittingly or unwittingly sets in motion. Listen to their underground noises, see their meaning, take enough distance from them so that you can hear and evaluate them. By observing and identifying them, you will gain a better understanding of how you create your life and what your creative process is. See the powerful words you speak behind that curtain, that fog of separation.

There are many powerful words you speak with the thoughts that are hidden, that are unclear to your observing consciousness, to the awareness that would permit you to utilize this material. When you observe and thereby dissolve the fog of the superficial word, the word that is merely noise and that is meaningless, that has no substance in your consciousness -- neither in feeling nor in belief -- when you go through this smoke screen and clarify your vision of the power of the word, you can then listen to your words and contemplate their meaning and be aware of their consequences and perhaps feel the energy current in each word you speak silently or loudly. You need to clearly enunciate the feelings, the convictions, the ideas that need to be examined as to their truthful nature and their effect on your life creation, your behavior, your receptivity and unhampered perception of reality -- your own and others' and life's.

When these words are not according to truth, when they are in whatever way contrary to divine unalterable truth and beauty, the creation of the energies of your words will take you into a self-perpetuating, involuntary pattern that seems to make life dangerous, alien, hostile, to be defended against. In this pattern you feel helpless -- a helpless pawn. But when you discover the power of the word and choose different words, words that are according to the truth of creation, you then create a pattern in which the involuntary process carries you in benign love, in ever expanding joy and abundance.

Now, when you do not have joy and abundance -- outwardly and inwardly in your life -- you must speak a word that denies this possibility for you. If you do not believe in that possibility for yourself (because you secretly, often without conscious awareness, feel undeserving), you often deny this possibility per se in creation. That defensive palliative seems perhaps less painful than admitting that you feel too evil and undeserving to have fulfillment. But the conscious awareness may at first merely be a general sense of pessimism, of nihilism and vague fears, as well as a total disconnectedness from the inner process of self-creation. The feeling of helplessness is overwhelming at this stage. Only when you begin to clearly pursue the chain and connection between your words and your experience will you gain a deep security in which you become part of the creative life process.

People who cling to nihilistic philosophies invariably hide the process I just described. This kind of world view cushions them against the painful belief that they themselves are unworthy of love and joy and fulfillment. All of you, my friends, carry such a word in you -- some more, some less, some in one way, some in another. Find that word in you. Find the word in which you consequently say "I will not love, love is dangerous, it will hurt me." It is another word of untruth that creates its pattern that makes it seem a truth in which you cannot experience the fulfillment your soul longs for. You are then caught in an involuntary process that indeed echoes that word, manifests that word. The manifestation of the process in your life, the involuntary life you create for yourself while you believe you have no say in it is the direct and indirect result of those words you speak -- sometimes loudly, without knowing what you say and why you are saying it, sometimes silently without being at all aware that you say such and such a word -- yet not necessarily unconsciously. For when you begin to observe the ongoing dialogue within, you will often see that your words are there on a quite conscious level, but you do not take notice of them. And sometimes the words you speak are really not on a conscious level and need to be dredged up. But there are always hints and clues one can follow that make their existence quite obvious if only you choose to make the connections.

In your busyness not to hear and understand your words, you do not take responsibility for the words you speak. I purposely say "words" rather than "thoughts," for we know that thoughts are only the outcome of the underlying factors that create the word. The word is the energy explosion. The word is that which immediately creates. The thought is the content. The word is its inception, its expression, its realization in its first stage. A thought without the word would be impossible. It would be meaningless, it could not exist. So the thought is the underlying consciousness factor of the energetic process. The spoken word is the finished product of the thought behind it. I repeat: this finished product of the thought -- the word -- is not necessarily conscious or articulate or vocal.

So my friends, take care of your words. Make room for clarity in your words. Take responsibility for the words you speak within. Your words are your life creation. Question the words you speak, whether they come from a thought of truth or a thought of untruth. A thought can be revised, it can be rejected, it can be debated. The word is already the finished product of it and is therefore the beginning of the creation. It is that which clinches the thought, as it were. So differentiate between the word and the thought. For example, if you think you are unworthy of the best life has to offer, you can question that thought. But if you speak that word in you, it is already a creation that is taken for granted, never challenged, never debated, and therefore uncorrected. And in that way it is given power, constant power, a power that is not visible or noticeable to you. But it is an undercurrent on which the boat of your life, the vehicle of this incarnation, constantly swings and rocks. It is as though you are carried by that current, and indeed so you are. But you are no longer connected with the current. You do not know that you created the current through the thoughts that create the words you speak -- the unchallenged, unquestioned thoughts you utter within your own mind.

So what you need to do is to realize that where the creation is undesirable and limiting, you must look for and challenge the word responsible for this state. You must begin to say different words.

My dearest friends, it is also important for you to understand that the word that is superficially spoken, while underneath the opposite word persists, will of course only create a short circuit. So if you say on a superficial level of your mind, "Yes, I have all the value," it is not going to "take." And you do this constantly. You pay lip service to many truths in your mind and in your thoughts, and you say the words, but you do not challenge the words that are opposite. The only way you can know, at first, that you speak such opposite words at all is by the results and the manifestations in your life. This is the absolute proof of what words are spoken within. There can be no mistake about that.

So look at the life situations that make you feel less than happy. Feel the involuntary process that carries you in that pattern, creating over and over again situations and manifestations that make you less than happy or unhappy. And then search within you for the word you say that creates this. What is specifically the word in this or that situation? I tell you, my friends, it will not be so difficult for you to unearth this now. At the beginning of your path, before your present awareness, you would have been convinced that the superficial, positive word is all there is, and you would have used the fact that the opposite experiences exist nevertheless as a proof that life is unfair and untrustworthy and that your own inner processes have no bearing on it. You would have only convinced yourself further that man is a victim of life. However, now that you have gone deeply enough to know not only your lower self and its negative intentionality but also your unfortunate hate for yourself and lack of faith in your higher self, in deserving fulfillment, in your rights to expand and stretch your consciousness into more alternatives for fulfillment -- now that you know all that, you will really be able to find the words you still speak in this or that area of your life.

In connection with this, I would like to say a few words about receiving and giving. You do know, of course, by now -- for we have often discussed this and you begin to see it increasingly -- that giving and receiving are one. But, again, this knowledge is often merely a mental and superficial one and not yet an experiential one. Emotionally and experientially there often is still quite a division. But you are becoming increasingly aware of the oneness even in the division. Let me be more explicit. When you speak the word of self-devaluation into your inner being, you must become fearful, you must deny moving out, you must prevent your heart from flowing to the next one. And you then, in this miserable state, believe that all you need in order to be helped out of this state is to be loved. But when love is given you, no matter how you long for it, you cannot accept it. You find ways and means to prevent taking it. Here, even in your divided consciousness, you find the unchangeable unity: as you do not give, you cannot receive.

Taking it is directly dependent on your awareness of having earned the right to do so, of being worthy of it. And giving your love is equally dependent on that, for if you are not aware of your worthiness, receiving love threatens a worse punishment and exposes you to the pain of your real feelings -- which is the sense of worthlessness. You can give love only when you can feel deserving of the pleasure to do so. And you can receive love only when you feel deserving of it, which cannot be if you do not wish to love.

No one else can give you the worth and the love that you need first to extend yourself. The fallacy of the thought that if you were loved you could then also love no longer has any room in your consciousness. It simply does not work. It is a false word you speak to yourself on some level. But as you try it out and observe it objectively, you see there is no truth to it. You are often given to, but you reject what is given in sincere love from others and God, from life itself. The word you speak thusly creates the false unity of neither being able to love nor to receive love. Only when you speak different words, deep inside, with all the feelings and all the conviction as a result of penetrating those deeper levels and transforming the false words into one clear-cut strong creative movement of the word, will loving and being loved become a oneness and not an impossible division.

In a similar way, when a new person enters the path and comes into the purifying and strong energetic environment of your Center, he or she will not be able to take in. And yet he must first take what the path and the Center have to offer. As he takes, as he makes himself take, so does he give, even in the taking only. Not being willing to accept what is given is a crass form of ungivingness. Taking is already a giving if it comes from sincerity rather than from the cheating, grabbing, acquisitive little lower self. Think, my friends: if you have something to give and it is not wanted, not taken, it hurts. But when the other one takes it, he gives to you by taking it.

Constantly you must see that in the taking is the giving and in the giving is the taking, the receiving. Even when the process alternates, you will find yourself in one stage more receiving and less able to give; or giving through your sincere receiving. That is all right. Receive it in truth and beauty, and you shall become stronger in the other kind of giving, too, where you give out actively from your resources. Speak the appropriate word to you, the word that will create the greater power to give and receive, each in truth, wisdom, beauty, and divine will. It will become an endless flow. Giving and receiving will no longer be differentiated, for they are indeed undifferentiated. But in your words deep inside of you, they seem opposites and thus you create conflict.

Now, my friends, go into your words. Observe the shallow ones, observe the words of untruth, consider in what way are they untruth. And then have the courage to speak the word of truth. Visualization cannot exist without a word of truth being spoken. This must become very clear to you so that more false words are challenged and given up. It seems to take a lot of courage to say the word of truth. For example, "I am God. I am worthy of the best. I can give the best. I will give the best. I will let God give through me in sincerity, in strength, in truth, in wisdom, in beauty." Why does it seem to take courage to speak these words, my friends? It seems to require courage for several reasons. For one, your lack of belief that these words are actually a creation and will create accordingly requires to bridge the gap from not knowing to experiencing. This gap can be bridged only by faith, and that, in turn, is a question of commitment. It is extending yourself into unknown, unexplored new alternatives and vistas, and that is always a matter of courage, a commitment of believing in this possibility even if you have not yet experienced its truth. The courage to strongly pronounce these words is a necessary step and prerequisite. Faith is always courage and strength.

For another reason, it is courage because the false safety measures into which so much false faith was invested, often for a long time, need to be relinquished. Unless this is done, the word cannot be spoken; therefore the creation cannot be forthcoming. The positive, involuntary process cannot be set in motion, a process that is like a gently rolling sea with an immense and benign energy just as you now experience this in your beautiful venture. More and more you marvel at what is happening. It is a strength from within that takes over and stretches beyond your limited visions and consciousness. You marvel at it, and you are right to do so. Know that this is the result and the creation of the many words of truth, strength, giving, commitment, faith, good will, and action -- in short, of the initial word that set all this in motion -- that many of you have spoken. Even though words of untruth are still spoken in those same consciousnesses, yet the words of truth that are also spoken have created a stronger power. And that power in turn has made it possible for divine spirits and entities and guidance to come forth in ever stronger measure, in conjunction with your own inner divinity.

I am sure you all know that you have received in this first lecture of the year a new tool, a tool that can now be meaningfully used and that could not have been so in the past. Use it, try it, experiment with it, and see the beauty of life opening up more and more. The love of all of us in our world constantly flows to you. Receive it. You are blessed, be in God!
