

THE PULSE OF LIFE ON ALL LEVELS OF MANIFESTATION

Greetings, divine blessings for everyone of you here, my very beloved friends. And special greetings and blessings for our friends here from across the sea (Peter and Eileen Caddy from Findhorn). As I said before, there is a very deep, significant meaning to the meeting of these two light centers. The reality of this meaning already exists on the inner level of being. On the outer level of manifestation, it takes some time before this inner meaning can fully materialize. More steps, effort, and groping may be necessary before outer consciousness follows suit and brings into fruition what the plan is. A mutual nourishment can come about that is of utmost importance. It has much greater meaning than many other linkages, for there are specific contributions to be made by each other, for each other, that will not only enhance the two light centers in question but that will eventually benefit all other light centers.

The outer mind is of course at times sluggish and does not immediately comprehend and follow through. But the greater meaning can indeed become a reality if all your feelers, your inner senses are attuned to the real meaning of this meeting, or linking. A mutual giving and exchanging and learning in a very meaningful way can become an ongoing process that will yield much more than you can now imagine.

This new age that has begun to manifest is, among other things, an age of connecting and linking in many ways, in many areas and on many levels. Primarily this connecting must take place on the inner levels, within the personality, but also on the outer levels so that eventually nations, religions, and all such differences will disappear. This does not mean that individuality and very individual self-expression will disappear -- by no means -- quite the contrary is true.

Perhaps we can say that in the age of duality, from which you are practically moving out now, diversity existed on outer levels, while uniformity and conformity often existed within the personality, wiping out true individual expression. The age of unity and unification, on the other hand, brings a different picture. Outer diversity or differences will disappear, for they will lose their importance. Outer belief systems will no longer be confused with inner independence of spirit. Different nationalities, loyalties, and religious affiliations will no longer be felt to give man the right to express his personal identity. Thus defiance will no longer rigidly prevent man from finding his soul's oneness with the All.

But the diversity of the individual divine expression of each human being will gain a much greater importance. Thus, out of group unification and group consciousness a much more clearly defined individual will evolve. And these clearly defined individuals will contribute to a greater unity in the group process.

In the lecture I am about to deliver now, my very beloved friends, I will speak about a specific phenomenon that will make it clearer what I meant when I mentioned the very special mutual contribution of these particular two light centers. The topic of this lecture deals with the pulsation of life and consciousness. Everything is pulsation -- divine pulsations. The universal spirit pulsates into matter, as it were. Matter is enlivened by the pulse of the divine. The divine movement pushes its way forth into the void, expanding and contracting. Each expansion moves the eternal life forward and enlivens the void with spirit. As I said before, the "momentary" meeting of divine substance and the void creates matter.

Now, the pulse is a life phenomenon that you are well aware of on the physical plane. The physical body is alive through the pulsations of the organism. The heart pulsates, the lungs pulsate, the bloodstream pulsates. These are known phenomena. But you are not familiar with the more finely calibrated pulsations of life in the body, in the mind, in the feeling self, and in the spiritual push that expands into the void and thus makes the void no longer a void. It becomes life.

Each individual life manifestation -- be it a human entity or another organism -- is a pulse beat. Life penetrates all organisms. As long as manifest life lasts, the pulse of universal life has expanded into this particular organism. It is one single pulse. Yet each life manifestation contains many different pulse beats, different laws according to which different rhythms create their own pulsatory rates. As the body has different pulse systems (and there are pulse systems in the physical body that are not yet known to man, for each organ, each cell, each pore, each molecule has its own pulse system), so have the layers of consciousness different pulse beats, pulse systems, pulsatory laws.

The existence of your earth plane is one pulse beat of the universal clock. Every planet has its own regulatory system of pulse beats. The star appears, the star disappears; perhaps one beat has billions of years of duration. But time is an illusion, and you perceive this illusion of time as different time spans. So, the pulse beat of a planet seems of a very different nature to you than one single pulse, pumping spirit life into your organism, through your heart.

As I discussed before, every pulse beat consists of these three universal movements bringing life into manifestation: the expanding, the contracting, and the static principle. In terms of a single human life manifestation, for instance, during the expanding movement of a single pulse, life penetrates the body of matter. During the contracting movement, life withdraws back into its own inner eternal realm that is the source of all life. During the static movement, it refuels, regenerates itself with the inner life principle and the potent energies of the nucleus until it is ready again to thrust itself forward anew, billowing further on into the void, fulfilling its innate plan until divinity has filled all there is.

Each single pulse of a total life manifestation consists of course of many subsystems of pulse beats. Just as the body has its main pulsatory system -- the heart -- so does it also have subdivisions in every single organ, making up the totality of the life manifestation. If one of these pulse systems does not function properly, life must by necessity be impaired. It is similar with all other levels of being. Each level has its main pulsatory "appearance." Consciousness, the feeling body, the system of the will -- every aspect of life and self-awareness -- consists of its main pulse, causing its very appearance in matter. But it also contains sub-pulse systems that are necessary for total functioning.

The perfection of the life manifestation depends on the strength and fullness of the pulse of divine life. If the pulse is strong and full, life will manifest this in various ways. Health, beauty, intelligence, goodness, talent, all these are of course divine aspects that are "pumped" into the life manifestation, as it were, just as the heart pumps the blood into the organism. Any kind of imperfection -- ill health, unattractiveness, lack of intelligence, negativities, problems, poverty, lack of talent, and so on -- reveals that the main life pulse of divine penetration is weak.

Now what governs the strength of a pulse beat? It is, of course, consciousness, inner will. In terms of human life, the underlying consciousness, appearing in matter in order to fulfill a specific task, may be strongly motivated to do so. Then the pulse is strong and full. If consciousness is only half willing to fulfill its own destiny, the momentary pulse of specific life manifestations will be weak. The rhythms of each pulse system are therefore dependent on intentionality, determination, will, on all levels of the being. The weakness of the pulse brings about a quicker -- at first perhaps partial, but then total -- withdrawal, that is, contracting movement. A short life span is a typical demonstration of this principle.

So you see, my friends, a "human life pulse beat" can be influenced by the consciousness that is truly the prime regulator. And as you, my friends on this path, delve deeper into the more intricate levels of your inner consciousness, you become aware of the intentionality that is usually hidden in regard to manifesting, pulsating, pumping spirit life into your body of matter, mind, and feeling. In other words, the pulse beat that represents your life manifestation is directly an expression of your intentionality. The degree of trust, well-being, vitality, perfection, creativity, fulfillment, and all the other aspects I mentioned before, as well as many others, is entirely dependent on the impetus, the strength, the power of the pulse of your spirit that enlivens the shell of matter. But only too often the thrust of spirit would be strong and cause an equally strong, billowing pulse beat, yet levels of consciousness of the personality interfere so that they need to be made known to conscious awareness. Then the conscious personality has a choice. It is in its power to strengthen the pulse beat and thus extend and perfect the life manifestation.

Each pulse is a billowing force. When you observe a life where there is illness, lack of energy, lack of vitality and creativity, or lack of any other divine attribute, you can be sure that the main life pulse is weak. As the movement withdraws back into the inner reality and the life of the spirit, the matter that was enlivened dissolves into its particles. Yet these particles will never be the same as they were before life inhabited and pulsated through them. The life that has gone back into itself, as it were, is waiting to billow forth again on its next cosmic pulse beat, creating new form, enlivening more matter, filling the void forevermore. That is the evolutionary plan until all of existence is totally pulsated through, permeated by divine life. It is a process in which there is a constant billowing, thrusting, expanding, and withdrawing, pulsating forward and pulsating back. The pulling back is part of the pulse, but it can be regulated and the pulse strengthened by inner intent and attitude.

Now each level of consciousness, each self-expression, each emotion, each expression of will, everything that exists in its tiniest (from the human point of view), most invisible particle is, of course, consciousness, and is therefore a pulsating expression.

The subdivisions of the life pulse of your current manifestation are manifold; so every level of your consciousness has its own pulsatory reality. Your thought processes, the life of your feelings, the expressions of your will -- how do they all combine? How do they interact? When you manifest in matter, you bring into your manifestation many aspects of consciousness. Consciousness permeates all of being. Your divine self chooses certain aspects to manifest, and others not to manifest. You choose "finished," purified aspects of your eternal being. But you also choose unfinished aspects, and you incorporate them into the unit that then becomes the personality so that many divergent aspects coexist.

In your pathwork you find this out, often to your surprise. On the conscious level you are convinced that you think only in one way about specific aspects of yourself, others, or life. Yet when you go deeper, you find that totally opposite thoughts, feelings, will expressions, and attitudes exist on deeper levels of your being.

It is therefore of utmost importance that the aspects that you are not familiar with in your consciousness become familiar, become known to you, and are incorporated into the process of your purification and transformation work. Otherwise the work remains half done.

In former times, it was not only sufficient, but it was the task of humanity to deal with the consciousness and the will level, to strengthen that aspect of the human personality, to purify that aspect. This was the prerequisite for what was to come later. These outer levels of personality had to attain strength in order to be able to fulfill what is to come now. In former times, all that could be expected was that the conscious will and mind be pure and good.

This development on the conscious plane could in itself open certain channels that reached, at least in part, to the inner reality of the divine self. Those who have the discipline to do the work on the conscious level could, and can, establish channels to the divine. However, when unconscious material remains unattended to, the pulsation lowers and weakens. For the pulsation can be strong only to the degree the total consciousness is in harmony with divine reality. This influences the reliability of the channel, as well as its scope, width, and depth. A channel may be reliable in a specific area only and quite limited in others.

It is therefore quite true to predict that in the age of unification, in which self-purification on inner levels must occur, the average age of human beings will be much longer because through inner purification the life pulse will be strengthened. The life span will thus be extended way beyond your present conception. This is very simply due to the fact that when the whole personality is in harmony with itself, when there are no divergent levels, when it is totally conscious of all of itself, then the pulsation can come through strongly. The enlivening spirit can enliven matter all the way, energize it, vitalize it.

At the present state of humanity's development, however, when even in the best of instances only conscious levels participate in the process, the unconscious levels prevent the strong pulse beat of divine life from expanding further and deeper. You have brought certain negative aspects into incarnation for the purpose of making them known to yourself. If awareness of these negative aspects is not being acquired, they will eventually weaken the organism and create either illness or, perhaps simply on an unconscious level, the will to die. Thus the life span becomes more limited than it need be.

In the new age it is of utter necessity that unconscious levels of the personality be included and dealt with so as to do justice to the process that is developing, that is organically waiting to materialize. The time has passed when attention could be given only to the conscious level of being. Much more intricate and subtle approaches are necessary so that the organism of an individual or a group or a community could grow in harmony and its task to be completely fulfilled.

To the degree aspects of personality remain unconscious, limitations exist not only in the life expression, but also in one's inner connectedness with the divine reality. The same is true even with the needs of the organism. The conscious self may be very pure and manifest a beautiful channel. But to the degree unconscious levels are ignored, the channel must have its limitations. By the same token, the personality will be limited in his or her perception of the real needs of the spirit, of the higher self, or even of the body. False needs will become predominant, and the personality will be confused. Thus the mind will no longer be able to assess what is real and what is false in your needs. The fine attunement to the needs of your organism -- both physical and spiritual -- can be relied upon only to the degree you have the courage to go all the way to see and familiarize yourself with, as well as to accept, all aspects of yourself that you have carried into this life with you as your task.

To make a bridge to these aspects, you need faith, courage, and your inner wisdom, all of which can be activated by your commitment to this path. That which prevents you from making the connections with the inner layers of your consciousness is fear. Fear of self is the greatest, the most dominant factor when you look to spiritualize your being in ways which avoid taking cognizance of that in you that seems less palatable. These ways of avoidance cannot be whole or complete. For if you have fear of some parts of yourself, you divide yourself.

As most of you know, often at first you do not even know that you have this fear of self. You are very quick to rationalize these fears away. Thus you lose contact with the real need of your spirit and create false needs -- needs to escape, needs to avoid parts of yourself. Just as the body can create false needs to the point of compulsion (for drugs, for harmful stimulants, for unwholesome food) so that the consciousness becomes involved in these false needs, so can the mental and emotional organism become polluted by the false needs to escape from some levels of your inner being.

As you become more thoughtful and more open to other possibilities, you learn perhaps, as a first substantial step, that there are indeed areas that you fear in you. When you can acknowledge these fears and not push them aside, you have built the first strong part of the bridge to your inner being that has remained estranged from you. Then, what follows suit is no longer quite so difficult. Once you know your fear and you question and challenge this fear, you create a strong new pulse beat on a new level of your being. You let in the spirit, the life of eternal reality, where it could not have penetrated before because your fears, or more exactly, the denial of your fears, created specific walls that prevented the full beat of the pulse that is your incarnation to enliven all of you, every particle of your mental, emotional, and physical organism. When you learn to overcome this inner fear and thereby to dissolve the inner defenses that can be so intricate and so subtle and so sophisticated, then you make room for an entirely new sweep and expression of divine life that wants to penetrate all of your being.

So you see, my friends, if you deeply work, and the fear begins to disappear as a result of your courage to challenge it, you liberate new energies in your inner world. You will begin to feel these energies as you meet new levels of personality that you may first dislike or have disdain for, and challenge these levels and learn to deal with them and learn to feel them. As this happens, an entirely new pulse beat extends and expands into your total organism, filling you with new life and new consciousness.

These inner linkings are so much needed in this world today. The spiritual movement needs this approach particularly in order to complete the total spiritualization of the inner personality. Then the power of the Christ consciousness, the power of the word of Christ, can manifest unhampered on all personality levels. This is what we in our world work for, seek to inspire you for, and seek openings for in many different ways, even if these ways, at times, seem disconnected from the spiritual reality that you know. For example, at the beginning of the century you experienced a new influx from psychology. Granted that this knowledge has its limitations, but it pointed nevertheless to the reality of divergent levels of the personality -- without which, total spiritual unification and purification cannot take place genuinely and realistically. Thus it was divinely inspired and necessary for the great task ahead.

We in our world can no longer be content with the purification on the conscious level. More is needed in this age. And as you experience in your outer world, in symbolic reflections, how the lower self of nations becomes exposed, so it happens with each individual. It may at first be sad, but how can true purification take place unless the sadness that has existed all along about the impure, limited aspects also reaches the foreground of consciousness. You must take the existence of your lower self seriously -- not in the wrong way by fearing it, but by meeting it in trust that its energies are divine and can be altered, transformed, and are essential. You must make sure that no part of you remains disconnected, rejected, and denied. For, to any part of you that you deny, you give much more power. It will indirectly manifest and in some way deprive you of something you need, either of vitality, health, happiness, joy, or perhaps of some necessary inspiration that you need but that cannot come through.

So my dearest friends, perhaps I can answer a question, at this opportunity, from my beloved friends from across the sea.

QUESTION: You spoke about Findhorn across the sea and spoke then also about the work and cooperation between our two Centers. There has been an exchange between our members. We discussed holding a full scale European conference next year. Have you any other suggestions as to how we may work together and cooperate in the days ahead?

ANSWER: Yes, I have actually already given some such suggestions to you, but I will say it again. It will be and would be of the greatest significance and importance if some of these methods of dealing with the purification process of the inner levels of the personality could be learned and used at your Center. This would give an entirely new dynamics and approach to the work you are doing. The exchange that has already taken place has already been quite effective in what this Center here has learned from yours. It has already been very beneficial. But now perhaps the other way can also be instituted, and then more fusion and exchange can take place that would become a true mutuality. You would of course both retain your individual "centership," if I may use the word. However, you will increasingly mutually benefit from each other in dynamic ways that find ever new expressions. Your Center holds a great influence over many other light centers and could thereby become very instrumental in extending this so essential aspect of the inner work. In the long run, without this inner work, the outer work will dry up. Many difficulties cannot be resolved unless this inner work is done. You know that every human being is a divine channel. Each has its own "specialty," each has its own preponderance of the infinite divine manifestation. The specialty of this channel is precisely the purification work, the method of it, the approach to it, the timing of it, the laws governing it. I say that this would be of great, great benefit.

QUESTION: I accept what you say in gratitude. Have you any suggestions of people who could come over now, soon, to Findhorn?

ANSWER: This can be arranged, I am sure, among you human beings. And also, perhaps you can send some of your key people here for periods of study to this Center. It can happen both ways. If you think and feel in this direction, and open yourself up, many wonderful and joyful inspirations will come that will enliven both these most beloved Centers.

QUESTION: Thank you, we look forward to that emerging.

My beloved friends, angels of God are filling this space. It is truly an inner space which is reflected, from your point of view, on the outside. These angels cooperate and are deeply concerned with the task that everyone of you has to fulfill, that is waiting for you in a time of great meaning and inner expansion and purpose. Each of you can be, and many of you will be carriers in one form or another of new truths and new ways. Every one of your tasks is of the greatest importance, and the happiness of each of you is of the greatest importance. It will be a natural expression of your devotion to the truth of your transformation, the devotion to the task that is waiting. So it will be a result and, at the same time, also a prerequisite. For only the joyous can give joy; only those in truth can bring truth; only the loving and loved ones can give love. Let yourself experience this every day and every hour of your life. The love of the universe permeates all that is, all that ever was, and all that ever will be, all that you are, every level of your blessed being.
