

PAIN OF INJUSTICE -- COSMIC RECORDS OF ALL PERSONAL AND COLLECTIVE EVENTS, DEEDS, EXPRESSIONS

My beloved friends! Greetings and blessings for all of you. May these words reach your deepest core, your inner and outer understanding, so as to be further motivated to plow through the thicket of confusion and illusion until you experience the Great Light.

There are so many different kinds of pain in your world. You have but one word in your language to designate so many different varieties of pain. It is the same with many other realities, such as love, for example. There are so many varieties of the manifestation of love, yet there is one word to describe these different phenomena. And many other human experiences are not clearly seen in their true light because of the limitation of your conceptual understanding, as well as the limitation of your ability to experience which, in turn, creates limitation of language. Language is your vehicle to communicate not only with others but also within yourself so as to create widened, more realistic understanding. Obviously this is a cyclic process, leading to benign or vicious circles. A fuller understanding will lead you to fuller experience which in turn will expand the scope of your ability to convey, communicate, and make comprehensible (for yourself and others) your experience. From there it will become organic to expand your language. I venture to say that, in a hundred earth years from now, your language will contain many new concepts that are as yet unknown. New words will exist to differentiate between different kinds of, say, love or pain or many another human states or human inner experience.

In the meantime I will help this cyclic process along by discussing different kinds of human experiences that are now still lumped together, all under one designation. At different phases, different human experiences need to be understood in a fuller way and differentiations being made. Now, for example, your understanding about different kinds of pain is essential.

Let me first name a few variations of pain before we discuss more in depth one particular variation that you have rarely, if ever, thought of as a specific kind. The most familiar kind of pain is when someone wounds you, wishes to hurt you, hates you. This type of pain feels distinctly different from all other kinds of pain. Then we have the type of pain that results from confusion in you when you do not quite understand what pains you and what goes on in you. Then you have the kind of pain that is distinctly the result of vaguely feeling you have created the state of pain, or at least cocreated, without fully understanding how and why. It is related to the pain of your own resistance to be in truth. Then you have the distinct pain of your guilt, guilt that is not being restituted and that you have no intention to make restitution for.

Some of the above pains are obviously interrelated. For example, the negation to clearly face and retribute for your guilt leads to confusion and frustration, which then in turn is often being projected onto others who are blamed for causing your pain. This is then the pain of guilt. These two kinds of pain create a vicious circle. But they are nevertheless two entirely different kinds of pain -- the pain of confusion and frustration and the pain of unrestituted guilt. They are in fact so different that they might well deserve two completely different words. And, as I said, one day this will be so. It will develop organically, for human language greatly reflects the organic development of mankind as a whole.

All these above named pains, you have experienced and know about although you have not always clearly known that they are different kinds of pain whose nature, origin, and causes, whose whole dynamics and effects, are totally different -- as different as a sequence of emotions in a vicious or benign circle, one creating the other. For example, guilt creates fear, fear creates anger, anger creates self-doubt and self-hate, self-hate creates negative behavior patterns and self-destruction, and so on. All these emotions are as different from one another, although interconnected, as one kind of pain is from the other.

This serves as a preface to the topic of this lecture, and, in itself, it will already help to clear up some cobwebs in your mind. Now, the specific pain I wish to discuss here that is so important for most of you to see in a new light at this state of your development is the pain of injustice. This type of pain contains more than could be put in this word. It is not just actual injustice happening to you here and now, a specific issue. This type of injustice could be classified as pain of being wounded and hurt. There is more to it than that. It is a fear that the universe can allow destruction to exist without safety valves. It is the fear that nothing has rhyme or reason, that good being done has no effect on the outcome of cosmic history and evolution.

You will say, quite rightly, that this is actually doubt, lack of faith in a meaningful universe that consists of supreme intelligence, love, justice. True, there is of course the pain of doubting, the pain of not experiencing God's existence. However, it is a very specific pain not to know that all deeds, all inner attitudes acts and states have distinct consequences. The realization of this fact establishes the faith without which you suffer the pain of doubt. So the pain of doubt is not the same as the pain of not experiencing justice. The latter leads to the former and the former also leads to the latter, but they are not quite one and the same. The pain of injustice connotes fear of a meaningless universe, of chaos. It distinctly results from -- and further creates -- disconnection. If effects are disconnected in the field of man's vision, fear of meaninglessness results. And that is the specific kind of pain under discussion here.

Man's field of vision is more often than not too narrow to allow him to perceive connections. This was discussed in more general ways in the lecture on cause and effect. We are now focusing on a particular aspect of the disconnection between cause and effect and that it leads to certain ramifications that create a very specific kind of pain.

Every phenomenon in the universe is being experienced within the human soul. The larger, macrocosmic fear of injustice (i.e., meaninglessness) also exists in a personal manner in the microcosm. On your path, you constantly deal with this phenomenon whether or not you are aware of it.

Much of the resistance you encounter in your personal purification process is based on this existential fear of a meaningless universe and the pain of life and the passage of time that results from it. Underneath the resistance to face the lower self is the pain of an unjust, chaotic, meaningless creation. Or, to put it possibly more accurately, the lower self is a direct result of the fear and pain in regard to apprehending injustice, meaninglessness, chaos. As is always the case, it then becomes self-perpetuating and works both ways: due to the pain of injustice, negativity ensues (the lower self). And, conversely, the guilt about the lower self fosters an attitude of not deserving salvation, i.e., eternal life, goodness, joy, utter justice.

When you ponder these thoughts, it will become clear to you that in the process of your personal work on the path, you frequently encounter a reaction that you may not as yet have crystallized in your thoughts, and that is, when doing so, apparently quite puzzling. It is the following: after overcoming resistance -- often quite strong resistance -- to face not only lower self traits per se but also its consequences and painful effects on you and your life, you experience profound relief. It is as though a weight had been lifted off your shoulders, a burden has fallen off you. Everything falls into place and fits. Why do you think that is so? It is precisely because you now literally and personally experience in your own microcosm that life is totally just and fair. This is infinitely more important than having to own self-destructive devices and impairment of your divine nature. These can be corrected, but a universe in which evil could win cannot be corrected and is an utterly dismal prospect.

A related manifestation is the converse: whenever you seem to "get away with" your lower self, the momentary triumph is very shallow and covers a deep despair. Your dual nature is on constant battle here. The one part strongly aims for covering, not meeting, justifying, projecting out, and thereby increasing the lower self energies and activities. This part of you fights the path process in many ways and aims to deceive your helper, to convince him or her that your cover-ups are valid. But the other part of you is very unhappy when the first part succeeds. Whenever your helper fails to discover your lower self maneuvers and is blind, together with you, about the connections (cause and effect), sooner or later you resent your helper for this failure. No matter how much you may have battled against the helper at first to help you see the connections between negative intent and undesirable experience, you feel truly let down when the helper does not ally with your higher self, no matter how covered up it may still be at the time in this regard. Deep lack of trust in the helper is directly connected with the lack of trust in a fair universe. If you can deceive and "win" with your negativity, your evil, your destructive attitudes, you realistically and logically conclude that the whole of creation is untrustworthy and chaotic. This is perhaps one of the most unbearable pains in the human soul!

I strongly recommend that you focus at this time on what I discussed here. Try to ascertain that behind resistance to face certain negative aspects, lies an even greater resistance to see that these negative patterns create inevitably negative experience and undesirable life conditions and circumstances. Once you can admit this resistance, it will be easier to go one layer deeper and become conscious of a deep longing to make these connections and an equally strong fear and pain that no connections exist, that all is arbitrary and senseless. Resistance to making connections between cause and effect covers fear and pain in regard to no such connections existing. Find the moments of relief in your past work when, after having overcome resistance, you realized the intrinsic fairness of life and that you really feel much more secure about life after seeing the connections. With this insight into hitherto obscure and vague and unnamed reactions, you will have made the pain of injustice conscious.

This is why a path such as the one you are choosing for your development and growth, one that goes into these depths and hidden crevices, brings a new and true security. It eliminates the pain of injustice because it establishes connections between cause and effect in your own soul life that remain inaccessible as long as strong resistances are not overcome. Love of and trust in your helpers are commensurate with your good will and intent to help them help you see what you most deeply long for. How can you trust and believe in and experience a just universe unless you see plainly how every one of your actions, thoughts, hidden intentionalities, feelings, and attitudes -- positive and negative -- has definitive results and effects? Little by little these personal connections unroll and reveal larger processes, gradually leading into the macrocosmic events. At first, almost all earthly events seem disconnected from one another. Things happen apparently arbitrarily without rhyme or reason. Only when the microcosmic connections are being made, do macrocosmic events reveal their meaning and connections, their cause and effects -- at least to a degree.

As long as you live in the shell of matter, encased in time, many connections can never be fully made. They remain invisible, although some links can sometimes be intuitively sensed. The main connections need faith. But true faith, which is to some degree experiential, comes into being exactly because the person's inner process moves toward an increasing uncovering of connecting links, thereby removing fear of and healing the wounds of the pain of injustice.

Think of your reactions when you witness earthly events of cruelty that seem to remain unapprehended, or, similarly, when good deeds and genuine love and giving seem to elicit undeserved negative effects, or, at least, fail to produce just rewards. In some occasions it is possible to go beyond the surface and see deeper connections that reveal the perfect justice of life. In some instances it is truly a question of time. For, in the immediacy, the connections and justice cannot be seen, while the unrolling of time, in your dimension, makes these connections obvious. Time eventually brings them to the surface.

But how many, many times in small issues as well as in large ones, in personal issues as well as in general and universal ones, it is quite impossible to see the connections. The unrolling of time extends beyond the human vision. All spiritual scripture speaks about the reality of ultimate justice that is often only possible to perceive and experience after the body is left behind and vision more extended. "The Last Judgment" or "Judgment Day" are intimations of this fact. These terminologies mean to convey that there is a "time" after death when all is revealed. Human beings usually react unfavorably to this concept because they think of it in terms of a punishing deity, a cruel, unmerciful ruler who imposes more unfairness on them. As you know, this was an ancient concept of God. God was confused with cruel earthly leaders and fathers. But the true meaning of the "final judgment" is the revealing of connections that show the unutterable beauty of faultless justice of spiritual laws. The joy and security of this discovery by far outweighs the personal price that needs to be paid for infringements of divine law. Even if negative karma arises, this is joyfully undertaken once the covers fall off because of the so much greater value of living in a just and trustworthy universe. This is a parallel experience to the one you feel at certain stages on your path and which I mentioned before -- relief when you see cause and effect even if it means paying the price. On one level man resists because he desires never to be accountable for his misdemeanors, never to have to pay the price. On a deeper level he profoundly dreads this possibility and is equally profoundly relieved to find out that every smallest particle of consciousness creates effects which, in turn, must come back to him and extract a price -- positively in a life affirming way or negatively in a life denying way, according to the cause.

How is it possible that all deeds, all attitudes, all ever so secret intentionalities can be accounted for, often decades later than when they were first conceived? How is it that someone's life can be adjudged long after the fact? It is important that you have some concept and understanding about the principle involved here. This will help you to open up inner valves to facilitate intuitive experience.

You already know that each human being contains an inner substance -- sometimes referred to as "soul substance" -- which reflects every particle of the person's life. Nothing is lost, nothing glossed over. Every thought of any significance, every feeling, every intent, every will direction, every action, with all their ramifications is imprinted into this substance and thereby made available to review. Thus a person's life is perused from every conceivable point of view. One's life is truly an open book. You all contain an inner recording device, if you will. One of man's greatest illusions (one among many others) is the idea that thoughts and intentions and desires can be kept secret and should therefore have no impact. It often happens that individuals feel resentful when others react to their unspoken intentions, their secret negative wishes, as if they should not count. So, what seems to be gotten by, unaccounted for, in an individual's life, good or bad, will ultimately be open and inevitably have its commensurate effects.

There are definite laws operative that determine when effects follow causes, when and why, in certain instances, effects follow suit relatively quickly and are thereby immediately traceable, and when there is a longer time span between them. It would be much too complicated to delve into this now. All I can say at this time is that the more an entity is developed, the faster effects follow causes. The entity who is still relatively undeveloped finds himself in the darkness of groping through the webs of cause and effect, of more often than not completely missing them only to discover them much later when the body is shed as a garment no longer needed.

Just as each individual carries his own inner soul tableau in which his or her personal records are being kept, so does your planet have a soul substance into which all that ever happened on earth is imprinted and can be taken cognizance of, just as could be done from reading an immaculately kept record. Some human beings have special gifts of clairvoyance through which parts of this world record is being revealed to them. Of course personal misinterpretations, due to limited consciousness, can distort this vision. Since this world recording system exists beyond three-dimensional time, the future -- that is, certain possibilities of the reality that might most likely manifest -- can be as available as the past.

The world substance is infinitely malleable, just as personal soul substance is. They are of the same "material." Nothing that ever happened, is happening, and will happen is ever lost. It automatically imprints itself in this substance. It does not only show the raw event -- or even the plain simple thought, attitude, will direction. It also shows the most hidden motives, the most secret intention, the exact balance of ambivalent feelings and the real reasons for making a decision, which of an ambivalent alternative the individual or the collective entity acts upon. In that way, no darkness or confusion can ever exist. Much of human argument, dissension, painful struggling in dark, confused states of mind are based on perceiving only a most superficial, pretended level of awareness while nevertheless being effected by hidden levels of consciousness in the self or in others.

This clarity of vision totally eliminates all fear and pain of injustice. It makes it obvious that you live in an infinitely just creation in which no error is ever possible. But this awareness cannot be "given" gratuitously. It must be "developed into" through the personal struggle of each entity to overcome the resistance to make every crevice of self known and to take responsibility for it. Scripture of many religious and spiritual orientations have always hinted at this ultimate justice. "Judgment Day" means nothing else but that. It is human consciousness, with its present limitations, that interpreted this in a very undesirable and fearful way. The word judgment seems to imply an unloving attitude of those who were supposed to judge, even an unfair, arbitrary, rejecting judgment. This is clearly a projection of humanity's own state of affairs. Divine justice is nothing more nor less than the full vision of all an entity expresses so that the inevitable consequences become the measure and the medicine to grow into wholeness -- that is, holiness.

You need to clearly understand and differentiate between the fear and resistance in regard to this full vision of unconcealed revelation of all that is, of the world soul substance that hides nothing, on the one hand, and the deepest longing in your soul for exactly this knowledge and experience, on the other. For only then will you heal the wound, with its profound pain, of believing that you live in an unreliable universe in which there exists no justice. You need to understand the deep struggle in your soul between these two opposite will directions. Then you will understand much of your struggle, and you will be able to help its resolution along with your clear consciousness. What your outer self often opposes most vigorously, your inner self longs for most ardently. When the outer self succeeds and induces the will direction of the manifest, acting personality, the inner self is in the greatest despair. A despair that is at times only vaguely felt, but sometimes quite keenly experienced, but never clearly understood. This despair is often misinterpreted, and life or others are blamed for it.

So, my friends, I say to you, experience the pain of living in an unjust universe. Only when you establish full awareness of this specific pain can you then, as the next step, establish full awareness of the struggle in you to heal this pain: the two opposite will directions. At this point, you need to understand that there is no other cure for this specific pain but to obtain the relief you resist against most -- that is, to ascertain the connection between causes you set in motion and effects in yourself and others. Once you really remove this wall of resistance, you will see how foolish it was to have it and what a relief it is to see the orderliness, the beauty, the infinite, merciful justice of creation.

Become aware of living, breathing, and being in an alive substance that registers at all times all that you are, all that you manifest, all that you express, all that you strive for. Your being, your aliveness has impact on the world you live in whether you know it or not. Do not fear this fact, do not resist it. You fear and resist knowing this because you believe that your destructive aspects are your essence, your ultimate reality. This would indeed be an unbearable alternative. It is whispered into your ear by the forces of darkness, whose interest it is that you remain in pain, fear, and confusion, disconnected from the greater reality of life. In this darkness you prefer to struggle in the pain of an unjust universe rather than seeing the beauty and justice of God's creation and discovering that you are ultimately good.

So you need to pray for the faith in your ultimate divine essence that can only fully reveal itself when you take cognizance of that which covers it up. This step of courage and faith is exactly what is necessary to summon on your path, again and again. The awareness of having impact on life through your very being, through simply existing -- rather than frightening you, it will give you a tremendous sense of peace and a sense of your values. It will motivate you to unfold all your still dormant divine potentials with which you will then be able to better mold ever newly unfolding life.

Life's infinite possibilities depend on every single created, conscious entity and its decision in each fraction of time -- which way to go, which way to think, act, and will. You are the director of your thoughts. Your thoughts do not befall you. Through your thoughts, you create the flow of feelings and the direction of your vital energies. The you that can make these decisions is the already manifest divinity. It is an illusion to believe that by not making decisions of thoughts, opinions, acts, and so on, you have no impact. Even when you actively choose, you often doubt that your decisions have impact. How much more so when it comes to your nonactions through lukewarm withholding of taking a stand, of actively searching for truth at all times! The reality is that your nonactions are actions in themselves that have every bit as much impact as your overt actions. Your soul substance registers the hidden motives for nonaction; it registers feelings and attitudes that are contained behind the decision to not act.

Since you are consciousness, since you are an aspect of divine manifestation, you cannot help breathing into the world substance by virtue of simply existing. All consciousness does that. Being must effect life, simply being. Know of the great privilege, the great power, the dignity, the infinite possibility that this fact confers on you. Know that each thought you harbor is a distinct energy formation, sending out waves and rays, creating according to the nature of this thought. Open your eyes to the beauty of this fact! Experience in this understanding of reality that you are, with your present limited consciousness, already now, a cocreator. You can represent God on this level of manifest, material, three-dimensional reality, or you can do the devil's work -- unwittingly in your case, but no less harmfully.

Allow yourself to ponder, to meditate, to visualize the fact that through simply being, you send out constant rays that harbor a meaning, that create distinct effects. Let this new vision lend a new dignity to your life; a new motive for becoming as creative as possible through your very being; the new peace and security your soul has longed for for a long time by knowing that there is perfect, sublime, infallible justice in the world you live in.

My beloved friends, your sphere is ready for new values, for higher values, for new understanding, for a deepening of insight about the nature of life. Our world is actively involved with awakening this new awareness and bringing it to express itself practically. Many inroads have been made through various channels, various types of divine influx all over your world. Little by little, new ideas are being spread from various sources. Since the forces of darkness have their power on your sphere, it is unavoidable that these new values and ideas are, at times, polluted and distorted. Nevertheless the power of awakening and growing consciousness cannot be halted. The current is in flux; the great waters of truth, love, wisdom of divine reality, of the Christ consciousness, seek their channels and break through obstructions. Every one of you can be instrumental in removing more of the obstructions and the pollution of these clear waters.

The earth consciousness is ready for a great new step in its growth. Just as with individual consciousness, so it is with a collective entity: if overall growth and potential for a deepening of understanding and an acceptance of truer divine values is hindered by parts that resist this movement, crisis and pain are inevitable. Pain and crisis are much more severe in these instances than when the overall consciousness is less developed and, in this state, on a more even keel. I have said this many times before in different contexts. World history gives you a clear map of this phenomenon. Whenever war and world catastrophe existed, the entity earth was ready to make a step in its growth process, in its collective consciousness expansion, that parts of the entity earth hindered through succumbing to its resistances. These resistances came forth from quarters that deliberately or unwittingly listened to the inspiration of evil entities and who gained power and influence over the rest of the world. Those who listened and followed these powerful factions are, in their own way, as responsible as those who were directly instrumental in halting the process of unfoldment.

Your earth sphere is ready now for a big step forward. All the inner faculties have been prepared to bring this step to execution. The forces of darkness know this and use every means at their disposal to halt this process. If they succeed, or to the degree they succeed, world crisis ensues. Every one of you have been prepared through your personal path in which you have liberated yourself from much confusion and pain, from much guilt and fear, and in which you continue to cultivate this process and bring it to fruition. This enables you to become intensely aware of what is at stake here, of how instrumental you as an individual can be -- first by creating truth and order within yourself and, as a result of this, by helping to do the same for the entity earth.

You often speak of your "outreach program." I say to you, my friends, that you and your world are indeed ready to hear, listen, and begin to make the effort of understanding, the new values and truths you are learning here constantly. Many of these have already become second nature to you. Others are still vague outlines, and you struggle to make them part of you. Be that as it may, you, this community as a whole, are ready to reach out and present to the world much of what you have learned. When you will be more aware of the power you have to mold life, you will avail yourself of this positive power and will be open to the guidance that wants to come through many of you to reach into your surrounding world in many different ways.

With these words, I ask you to make every effort possible to comprehend this lecture, to complete this understanding by linking it up with the preceding lectures of this year. Awareness is growing in you by leaps and bounds. Inner knowing seeps through with increasing vision of how the world really is. Knowledge, experiential knowing, of infinite justice must give you the peace and security you long for in your heart. Know that all you are, all you think, will, and feel is impressed into a malleable universe. Do not let the initial fear of this thought drive you back into your world of darkness, fear, resistance, distrust, and pain -- the pain of injustice. This pain of injustice can only be healed when you muster the courage of allowing yourself to know that your negativity causes pain to others and yourself, has definite consequences. The courage and truthfulness of this realism, the maturity of this attitude must show you that, far from this indicating a hopeless state about you and your relationship to God, to Christ, to love, goodness, mercy, to the world as it is created; it will restore your soul, your faith in yourself and God and all that is good.

Since life is change, your lower self is also a constantly changing aspect of life. It contains innate capacities to transform the worst into the best. Taking responsibility for the lower self is no longer so difficult for most of you, regarding many aspects of the lower self. You have learned to do so, and thereby you have gained new freedom and new self-esteem. What is still difficult for you to accept is the fact that lower self aspects have effects and influence your thinking and acting, your perceptions and your reactions more than you wish to admit. It is this very fear that causes the deeper fear of injustice. In not facing consequences of the lower self, you try to cultivate the illusion that there are no effects. If you pursue this line of inner, unconscious reasoning to its logical end, you create an imaginary world of injustice, suiting the wishful thinking and fear in you of the consequences you yourself create.

Use this clear indicator or key: To the degree you experience fears and anxiety, to that degree you feel pain of an unjust universe and to the exact same degree you do not want to know that your lower self has effects and consequences. Conversely, to the degree you name the fear, you look into the pain of injustice that gnaws inside of you, and, further, to the degree you overcome resistance to see how you wish to disconnect from the consequences of lower self attitudes, to that exact same degree you will free yourself of an immeasurable burden and will gain a deep new security -- the security that all is very well with life.

You are all blessed, my beloved friends. Many of you have recently learned much in your innermost being. Many of you are struggling in your growth, and, as I said before, it is a noble struggle that elevates you in the best sense of the word. Continue this good struggle, be an instrument for God's great plan, put yourself under Christ's protective energy and consciousness. You live in a sea of love, you breath into a universe of sheer goodness. Make yourself conscious of this most beautiful of all facts of life!
