ASPECTS OF THE NEW DIVINE INFLUX; COMMUNICATION, GROUP CONSCIOUSNESS, EXPOSURE

Blessings, my dearly beloved friends. God's light envelops you all. This light contains all you need. Try to perceive it, try to feel its reality. It is always there for you, and to the degree you refine your inner being through the purification process, you cannot help being aware of this light that flows through all the universes, through all of creation. Those of God's children who have chosen to make the very best of their lives through such a path in which to purify and therefore being able to serve are specially blessed. For they fulfill a great need in the great plan.

In this lecture I would like to speak about some specific aspects that are significant for the new age. This word has recently been used a lot by certain groups of people. Some use it in right understanding, some manage to make it a cliché. But this happens with all concepts of truth. There is hardly a protection against this, for the glibness exists in man's mind. It exists because of laziness and a tendency to label so as to avoid feeling the reality of a specific truth. But this must not influence those who do not fall into this trap to give up the truth in question. I have time and again in the past warned against this tendency and have sometimes suggested new words, different expressions for the same truth. Other times I have repeated the true meaning of a specific concept in order to keep this truth alive. This accounts for much of the repetition you find in these lectures.

As far as the new age is concerned, I have stated before that at certain intervals in history a new influx comes into your world because humanity has grown sufficiently to make it ready for this particular influx. So it is now. We often discussed this topic in more general terms -- about the meaning and significance of the new age. We talked about the consciousness of the Christ spirit permeating this world, trying to fill the consciousness of individuals to an ever greater degree.

It is fairly obvious that such a powerful influx must bring in its wake manifestations that are not always pleasant, welcome, agreeable, or even constructive. Many events on your earth are outright undesirable but are, nevertheless, direct results of this influx. In fact, without them the growth and expansion of consciousness inherent in this new age could not take place. Your own mind is still very much geared to the immediate. That which is good and right at this moment is always, in your idea, also ultimately good and right. And the converse is equally believed in although that is hardly always the case. An outright negative manifestation may indeed be necessary for the total development to take place. This applies to the individual as much as it does to the entity mankind or, to put it differently, to the entity earth.

In this lecture I should like to discuss some specifics that accompany the new influx. One is communication. Communication is a by-product of a highly developed consciousness. To the degree development of spirit exists, the ability to communicate, to listen and express adequately and appropriately also exists. To the degree development is still impaired, the ability to communicate is limited. So you see innumerable people who cannot and will not even try to put into words what they really feel and think. They are too proud, or they demand from others to be understood without having to labor to make themselves understood. For it does require some labor. The ability to communicate is an art that can and, indeed, must be learned by everyone. It contains good will. It contains a positive intentionality and a will to cooperate.

But let us start this topic on the most outer level. It is no coincidence that one of the major by-products of modern technology is communication. Even though this level of communication applies to outer events only, it has a tremendous impact on inner levels of humanity. In the first place, it brings people much closer together. In former times the sense of separateness was much greater because the distance between people, the lack of communication, created illusions in the minds that others are intrinsically different, alien, and therefore enemies to be distrusted. Seeing others being so similar when it comes to the basics of living, dying, suffering, longing eliminates much of illusion, fear, and enmity. It contributes to the ever growing unity.

Even knowing what is going on in the world has an impact on spiritual growth. The sense of isolation that people lived in in former times contributed to separateness. It made your world appear too vast to encompass it. One's own tragedies seemed unique, hence the sense of brotherhood and sisterhood was totally lacking. Today even the least spiritually inclined individuals experience your entire planet in an entirely different way in which much that was strange and different no longer exists. Even knowing the events that happen right now in a different corner of this earth has an impact on the soul's development. So you see, my friends, technology is not in opposition to spiritual development and to the spiritual life although it is often being used that way -- or rather abused. Therefore it is often seen that way.

This serves again as an example of how everything in the universe and on this earth is intrinsically an expression of divine will and creation and can and should serve the great plan. It cannot be different, for nothing can be created that does not have its roots in the world of spirit. All demonic manifestations can only be distortions and misuses of divine creation. They can never have been self-creative.

Your present ability to witness, and thus to experience with your brothers and sisters elsewhere has a significant impact on your soul. Your ability to move relatively speedily from one corner of your earth to the other brings you to closer proximity to the laws of the spirit world, where movement is instantaneous, one with thought.

Communication is a most important by-product of advanced spiritual states. On more subtle levels this ability has also greatly improved over the last decades. The event of psychological approaches has created a greater awareness of self and therefore a greater ability to explain oneself, to express oneself to others, and thereby to communicate. You must imagine how, before this particular influx, human beings were completely in the dark about themselves, their feelings, their needs, their true reactions, let alone those of others. It was therefore impossible to create a bridge with another person in a significant way. It is similar with children now. A child does not really know that it knows it is hurt, lonely, that it needs more love or attention or understanding. If this awareness were articulate in the child, it would be a relatively small step to convey these feelings to another person. Without communication, you live in the dark, in a fog of confusion with yourself, and isolated from others. The Christ spirit represents exactly the opposite. It means the great light of awareness, of articulation, and of brotherhood.

Obviously this means primarily communication with self, with inner levels of being that were inaccessible before. This must always be the groundwork. For you cannot convey, explain, and communicate that which you do not even know. So a path such as the one I guide you on must always be primarily concerned with self-knowledge, self-exploration. But it must never stop there. This is only the preliminary phase. The next organic step is the learning of the great art of communication. This requires thought, intentionality, practice, self-observation. It means giving up the state of being only half awake in which you unthinkingly take for granted that others should know. It means taking the effort to explain, to reach out, to search through the mazes of misunderstanding -- patiently, lovingly. Here, like in everything else, practice leads to an increasingly more spontaneous and automatic ability to be outwardly what you have been only secretly and inwardly to yourself before, and to communicate this to others.

Just use your imagination, and think about the enormous difference this makes in human communication. How often do you believe someone is mean to you when, in reality, this other person fears you and erroneously uses a coldness or rejecting attitude as a defense. Knowing this removes your fear, your false pride, your anger and may enable you to meet this person in an entirely different way that, in turn, will dissolve his/her negative defense that alienates others. So you see how communication brings souls together instead of creating fearful and therefore hating walls between humans. Communication is an intrinsic part of the good life.

This art not only consists of that you attempt to explain yourself. It most definitely also includes the how. If you explain yourself in a way that implies blame and accusation, you only create a bigger wall. But if you attempt to explain yourself by simply conveying your own feelings and needs, your impressions and assumptions, without insisting that they be the truth, in a questioning, open spirit, then a true understanding can be reached. Clarity, light, truth will be established. Love and brotherhood are being fostered through the art, and craft, of learning how to communicate.

How can your loneliness be assuaged unless you establish bridges with others? How can you ever lose your fear of people unless you truly expose the misconception that others want to be your enemy? And that cannot be achieved unless you go through the trouble of exploring yourself sufficiently so that you know what it is you really feel. How often do you believe what you feel is not at all what is really going on in you. And then you need to take the apparent risk of explaining yourself even if this can rarely be done in one simple stroke. It means a continuous dialogue full of good will and being willing to shed pride and your stake in being blaming. This is what communication means on an emotional level. And this will increasingly establish the great oneness among all human beings. It will increasingly remove fear and hate -- hence war on large and small scales. In other words, this will contribute to bringing the kingdom of heaven to earth.

But there is yet a deeper level of communication at work of which you know nothing. This is a level that is still very obscure but that will reveal itself as clearly as those other levels I have now discussed, once you focus your attention and awareness to it. All interaction between human beings somehow conspires to contribute to the final aim: reconciliation, oneness, brotherhood, love, understanding, truth. Thus the most negative interaction between individuals serves this purpose in the final analysis.

When two entities -- individual or collective ones -- are involved in a negative interaction and even if this interaction has a most undesirable result at the moment, a deeper purpose is being fulfilled. The higher self of both entities is always at work. It is not that the higher self has created the negative interaction per se. It is that what already exists is being used for the purpose of dissolving it. This dissolution and transformation of negative material could not possibly take place unless there is an outright manifestation. Even if the involved entities are totally in the dark about the part they themselves play in this interaction and are still on the level of self-righteous one-sidedness, a higher purpose is served nevertheless. How much more so when entities recognize the total truth of the interaction that may be hidden from their immediate view.

So you can see, my friends, that underneath the lower self exchange, there simultaneously also exists a higher self exchange between the same entities in question. This is a very important new thought for you to contemplate. Just imagine: two people (or groups of people) are at war on the surface. They hate and accuse each other. They even wish each other the worst and want to harm each other. At the same time, on a deeper level, these entities agree. They know what occurs on the surface serves the common good, serves truth and love, serves their unity although their surface levels know nothing of this.

When you work on this path profoundly to come to the truth of the issue when two of you are at odds with each other, you often experience a wonderful conciliation in which love unites the same two individuals who hated and accused each other before. You witness what I explained just now. On your earth sphere, in this dimension, the manifestation of conciliation happens in sequential time: first the hate, then the search for truth, then love and unity. On the deeper level of being, these sequences do not exist. The truth, love, and unity exist all the while.

It is important for you to take this new vision into account. It will help you to perceive that there is no situation, no matter how hopelessly confused and negative it may appear, that does not simultaneously harbor its inner truth, love, and unity. Your understanding this fact will accelerate the conciliations on the level of sequential time so that enmity/search/truth/love/unity follow each other in ever quicker succession.

The influx of the Christ consciousness means to bring more spiritual values and laws into your plane. Many spiritual laws and values are generally known through religions, but few are truly understood and experienced in depth, let alone lived on the innermost levels. Still, too often, humanity takes these laws and confuses them, distorts them, and either then disregards them altogether because the distortion makes no sense or hypocritically obeys them on a surface level that fails to reach the inner person. The more humanity grows, the greater the influx of the Christ light can be, and thus the more it will be possible to make true spiritual values part of the human consciousness.

In this particular lecture we are dealing, first of all, with the law of brotherhood, which I have often mentioned. Without brotherhood there is no love, without love there is no brotherhood. Love is union, hate is split, dissension, isolation. Love means mutual understanding. But in order for such understanding to grow, effort and good will have to exist. In other words, love is not something that happens like a miracle, nor is the experience of union. Union with God cannot be experienced unless you are able to experience union with your brothers and sisters, even those who you think are your enemies. On the outer level, friendship with them may not be possible to achieve, for it takes both parties to really desire the truth and union. But on the inner level, you may well be connected, quite consciously, with the higher self of that person.

Never forget, love, union with God and other people, is the result of communication. And communication is a result of serious effort, commitment to use your attention, your effort, your energies, to make yourself understood in the best possible way and to understand the other. For both purposes, you need to empty your mind of all preconceived ideas your lower self has a stake in retaining. You need to put aside enmity and distrust. You need to listen deeply and openly. You need to convince the other of your good will for the truth. You need to summon the maturity to realize that others do not know what you mean, feel, think, and want. You need to explain yourself on the deepest, most sincere way possible. In that way, there is no problem between you and others that cannot be resolved. What strength and self-esteem will grow from this, my friends!

But you do need to sacrifice your pride, your stubbornness, your pleasure in having a case, your fear of finding out that you are wrong and bad. All this must be put aside. In that way you will greatly contribute to the ever growing flow of communication in your era that is unprecedented as compared to previous times. In that way you help herald an important aspect of the Christ consciousness -- within yourself and others. You then truly become a servant of God's plan. Desist from the temptation to keep yourself locked up in isolation and resentment. Equally desist from the temptation to accuse and to blame. Make yourself neutral, at least temporarily until you have the chance of finding out what the truth is. Do not fear this truth. It will be so liberating, it will let you off the hook of secret self-accusation as much as it will let others off the hook of your accusations although you may well find imperfections in both. However, these imperfections will have a new connotation that will free you of hurt and shame as well as of the need to put hurt and shame on others.

Yes, my friends, this is what has taken place in your work all along. So I am not telling you about a new process. But I want to shed a new light and angle on this process so that you can deepen your commitment to follow it through. There are still many occasions when this could be done much more.

The new influx sweeps with tremendous force through your world. This is not always recognized in its manifestation. In the first place, it reaches man's inner consciousness. Wherever there is the slightest potential, this consciousness begins to change -- perhaps ever so subtly, ever so gradually; possibly through new ways of thinking about life; or through a desire to find a way to understand self and life in a more profound way.

But even those who are less ready and developed may often unwittingly lend a hand, so to speak, to the great plan that unfolds. They, too, become instruments even though their instrumentality may appear entirely negative. But through their sphere of influence and activity, they effect events which then conspire to bring about new conditions. It is again, as I explained before, the higher self of such a person working in conjunction with the plan and using the negative outer will to contribute to the whole picture.

The new influx, also called the new age, also effects outer events. Often this happens in a most obscure way. What may appear as an entirely undesirable, negative occurrence is, in reality, a necessity in order to establish new values, to reestablish life based on spiritual premises, truth, and love. In other words, destructiveness that has advanced so far that it can no longer be changed, molded, transformed, needs to be destroyed before a new and better structure can be erected. Many destructive events in your earth are of that nature. You need to learn to distinguish between those events that are outright and directly opposed to life, unnecessary, and the expression of evil and those that fall into the category I now described. This is not always immediately discernible, but as you train your inner vision and become more aware of these processes of creation, your perception will become more accurate.

Many of you already see that new values are springing up all over, working their way laboriously through the thicket of the old weeds -- obsolete values, negative and destructive attitudes and behavior toward life. The new values are still small and delicate plants that need nurturing, courage, commitment to the larger cause of life, and the ever necessary self-honesty that fosters development and expansion of individual consciousness. The more of you who follow this road, the stronger the plants will become on your planet.

The process is always according to cellular structure. It begins with the single cell -- the individual consciousness that needs to change. This individual change cannot take place alone, but always in conjunction with others. For individual consciousness is part of the collective consciousness, the great whole. Individual values and development can only be measured by the interaction with others. Communication is one aspect that improves interaction until there no longer exists separation. The more individual cells -- consciousnesses -- begin to purify and align with divine will, the more the totality of the earth entity will be effected. The cells meld into one structure although they each have their individual life.

There is a great deal of ambivalence in regard to this melding. On the one hand, man fears giving up what he calls his "individuality." He believes that his uniqueness, his particular divine manifestation, is dependent on his separation. He falsely assumes that by oneness he loses any of what is uniquely his. In reality it is just the opposite. Thus he struggles against the innate fate of all created beings -- the striving toward oneness. He resists and fights it, to his own great chagrin. For, on the other hand, the longing for this oneness can never be assuaged until it is beginning to take place. The longing is desperate in the soul, the pain of not experiencing it is excruciating. But not knowing of this longing, not feeling this pain, is the worse state of apathy, unaliveness, confusion, and secondary pain that can never be comprehended because it is a result of a long chain reaction whose origin is exactly the pain of denying oneness.

It has often been mentioned that the new age, or as it is also called, the Aquarian Age, brings about group formations, group consciousness. This has not existed in the same way before. Of course, mankind as a whole is a group on a larger scale. Society could not exist unless group consciousness would not be cultivated to some degree. But until now, individuals were mainly concerned with themselves, their own interests, regardless of how this effects the rest of the world. Not that this attitude has now disappeared -- far from it. But a new awareness is growing in which man begins to see that if he pursues only his self-interest to the detriment of others, it goes far beyond violating moral and spiritual laws and values. He begins to see that he must suffer from it eventually as much, if not more, as those whom he disregards with his shortsighted selfishness.

The human family could not exist without a group spirit. But the general establishments of society have not yet put sufficient weight on spiritual values. They are unaware of any new influx, and they proceed by old standards, values that are often based on expediency only and on the most shortsighted goals. It is surely no coincidence that in your time new groups, communities of all sorts, are growing all over. Many of them are misguided; many succumb to the influence of destructive forces and evil spirits. This can never be different on this plane of consciousness. Wherever there is divine influx, the demonic forces send out their own influences to corrupt those who are not purified, to tempt and to destroy. But this does not change the fact that new communities must spread which represent the new values and which become models for new ways of life. The question is always to be wakeful and never neglect the work of self-purification. This is the only key of safety. If this is followed through painstakingly, in the spirit of service to fulfill God's will, the evil forces cannot confuse you. You will always know, you will find the answers, you will stay clean, even if there must be temporary manifestations of your lower self.

Another manifestation of the new influx I wish to discuss now is exposure. Again you can see this aspect individually and collectively. It can hardly be missed, it is so obvious. Through psychology, and recently through profound spiritual work, exposure of self has reached new depths as never before in your history, with the exception of the initiates, the few minorities in different cultures. Now exposure of deeper levels of self has reached unprecedented degrees. Even the least knowledgeable people have attained a certain degree of awareness that there are deeper levels of being that determine their lives. This is now being taken for granted, but it was by no means always so. This ability to explore the self is a combination of communication and exposure, two aspects of this lecture. The willingness to expose leads to communication, and communication leads to oneness, to alignment with the Christ spirit that sweeps with great force through your world.

The resistance to expose is always present. It is obvious that denial of exposure makes for isolation. When exposure is denied, it always means that there is a stake to maintain a rotten structure, a structure that needs to be eliminated and renewed. Denial of exposure clearly implies the wish to live a lie. Dedication to the truth must bring in its wake the willingness and the courage to expose. If exposure is not undertaken willingly, it will come from outside, by force, as it were, through crises that throw a secret matter to the surface. Once the force of the new influx is set in motion, it cannot be halted. The more it is opposed, the more painful crisis it brings.

In your public life this has also become very obvious. In very recent times, much hidden destructiveness has been exposed and communicated to the public. Again, this has never been the case before in the same way and to the same degree. And it continues, something new has been set in motion. Through communication, the whole world knows of political misdeeds that would previously have remained secret. Through exposure it has seen the light of day in the first place. Through evolving group consciousness, a great interplay and interaction takes place so that all of mankind can participate in the drama of development.

It is important to view world events with this understanding. Is this not exactly the process you follow in this path -- exposure of your lower self and sharing it, communicating it to others? Can you think of a better way to establish love, trust, closeness? Again and again I show you parallels between the development of the individual and of the planet. All the processes you learn to apply happen, in some form, on the collective level. Exposure has never existed in the way it does now. Masks are beginning to fall off, lower self aspects begin to show clearly with less concealment than ever before. Thus events and intentions can be recognized for what they really are, without the camouflages that brought so much lying, so much suffering, so much confusion.

Exposure is very much a part of the new influx. It is a direct expression of the Christ consciousness that sweeps through the inner and outer planes of this planet at this time. Spiritual development without exposure can at best only be a half measure that leads eventually to a stalemate. But exposure must be infused with love, otherwise it becomes self-defeating. It must bear the respect for the person who has the courage to do it willingly. Those who refuse to do it willingly must not be allowed to destroy their environment and to influence events through their concealment. The courage and strength necessary to bring about exposure wherever appropriate and necessary stems from the inner conviction that it is done in the service of a larger cause -- in other words, in love. The more you expose yourself to yourself and subsequently to others, the more will you discover your true, intrinsic worth. You will know that that part that makes the exposure possible is the already developed higher self. It is the same with the planetary entity. All the exposures that occur at this time on the political front are being conducted by the planet's higher self.

When you think of the new age, it is necessary that you do not only think of it as a general, vague force. It is necessary to imagine that specific aspects manifest in various parts of your earth as the need arises. The new age is not a vague thing. It is a consciousness by and in itself. As all consciousness, it consists of many aspects, completing a harmonious whole. In this lecture, I discussed three particular aspects: (1) communication, (2) group consciousness, (3) exposure. Perhaps the sequence could be changed or reversed, but that does not matter.

We also discussed the inevitable parallel between all these aspects taking place on the individual and on the collective levels. You are quite well versed on the individual level since this was the emphasis of your pathwork all along. Although there are still some obstructions and resistances in this regard, in principle you are reconciled with this practice and comprehend its intrinsic necessity and value. On the collective level, you can observe, and this will help your expansion as an individual. By seeing the principle repeated in microcosm and macrocosm, deeper understanding grows. Through this understanding and through your ever intensified efforts toward self-exposure and communication with your smaller group, your immediate circle of dear ones with whom you share your process of development, you greatly contribute to the planetary development although it may not be possible for you to see this influence directly and immediately. But gradually you will sense it in ever growing realization.

Where you still need to apply more awareness and attention to is how these aspects may be better utilized in your own community life. There still exists too often a blindness to self-exposure and that of others, that fails to bring the truth to the surface. Thereby communication -- and hence love and union -- are being undermined. Communication could be much better if a more profound effort were being made to explain yourself and to help others through a nonthreatening attitude to do likewise. Communication could also vastly improve if you help others to be more receptive to what you know and have to teach and, similarly, to be more open and receptive to where you could learn what others know and have to teach. Only too often a bland, dull numbness encases you into a half-vague, opinionated, incomplete, secretive holding on to assumptions that close all doors. This is where your spirit friends wish you to improve and make of your beautiful, golden, ever growing community a greater glory, expressing the Christ, serving the Highest.

Also I want to point your attention to a specific observation: watch the parallels between outer and inner growth and expression of your higher self group entity. At times one is ahead of the other; at other times it is reversed. A balance should be maintained. It can never be completely even, and this is not necessary. One may always limp behind, and if this is not too long extended and the distance not too great, it can easily be adjusted. No crisis will accrue from it, it is all in the scheme of things. So far, your inner development has always exceeded the outer, and this is truly the more important, the more solidly grounded way. But the time has come when you can consciously "catch up" with the outer so as to make it more an expression of your inner reality.

Look at this beautiful world with the eyes that see the whole, that comprehend the Lord's working behind all that is. Let your hearts be filled with the freshness of life's healing power that flows from the Source that encompasses all that ever was created and ever will be created. This Source resides right in your own center, even when you are unable to connect with it, experience its reality through your confusions and your momentary suffering. It is always there.

You are all surrounded by the Great Force that flows with such renewed vigor through your universe. Be blessed, my beloved ones. Pursue your commitment to the end; never let up in your devotion to serve God.
